Welcome to Taste Champagne!

We live in an exciting and dynamic era for champagne in Australia, and 2022 represented a record-breaking year like no other.

Champagne imports hit a eight-figure sum for the first time in history, up more than six percent to more than 10.5 million bottles, with an export value up more than 17 percent to more than €187M.

This further compounds the increases of 16.5% in volume and 26.8% in value in 2021, when Australia imported more than 9.9 million bottles, with an export value of €160M.

Such growth is unprecedented across the champagne world, and all the more significant in the context of Australia's recent champagne history. Just two decades ago in 2001, we imported just 890,000 bottles of champagne with an export value of just €15M! Read more about champagne's performance in the global market at my new site, www.champagne.guide.

2023 represents a volatile time for champagne sales globally. Record demand has put unprecedented pressure on supply. In response, all the top growers and houses have put every cuvée on allocation in every market. Inconsistencies in supply channels and currencies have further disrupted shipments.

Meanwhile, cost of production continues to rise, with dry goods and shipping recording their steepest price increases in modern history. And demand continues to push the cost price of grapes to new record highs. Most significantly of all, the steady march to sustainable viticulture has inflated the cost of grapegrowing by 25 percent, while diminishing yields by a similar proportion.

The record demand for champagne during and after the pandemic offered houses their first real opportunity to pass on these cost increases to the consumer. This year we have seen price rises between three percent and thirty percent.

While the Ruinarts, Krugs and Salons of the champagne world will remain in hot demand irrespective of spiralling pricing, it remains to be seen whether entry non-vintage cuvées can sustain as much as 30 percent price hikes this year.

In this increasingly volatile champagne world of scarcity and inflation, it has never been more pertinent to keep a finger on the champagne pulse, to assess every release with greater scrutiny than ever, and to move more decisively and more swiftly to secure allocations.

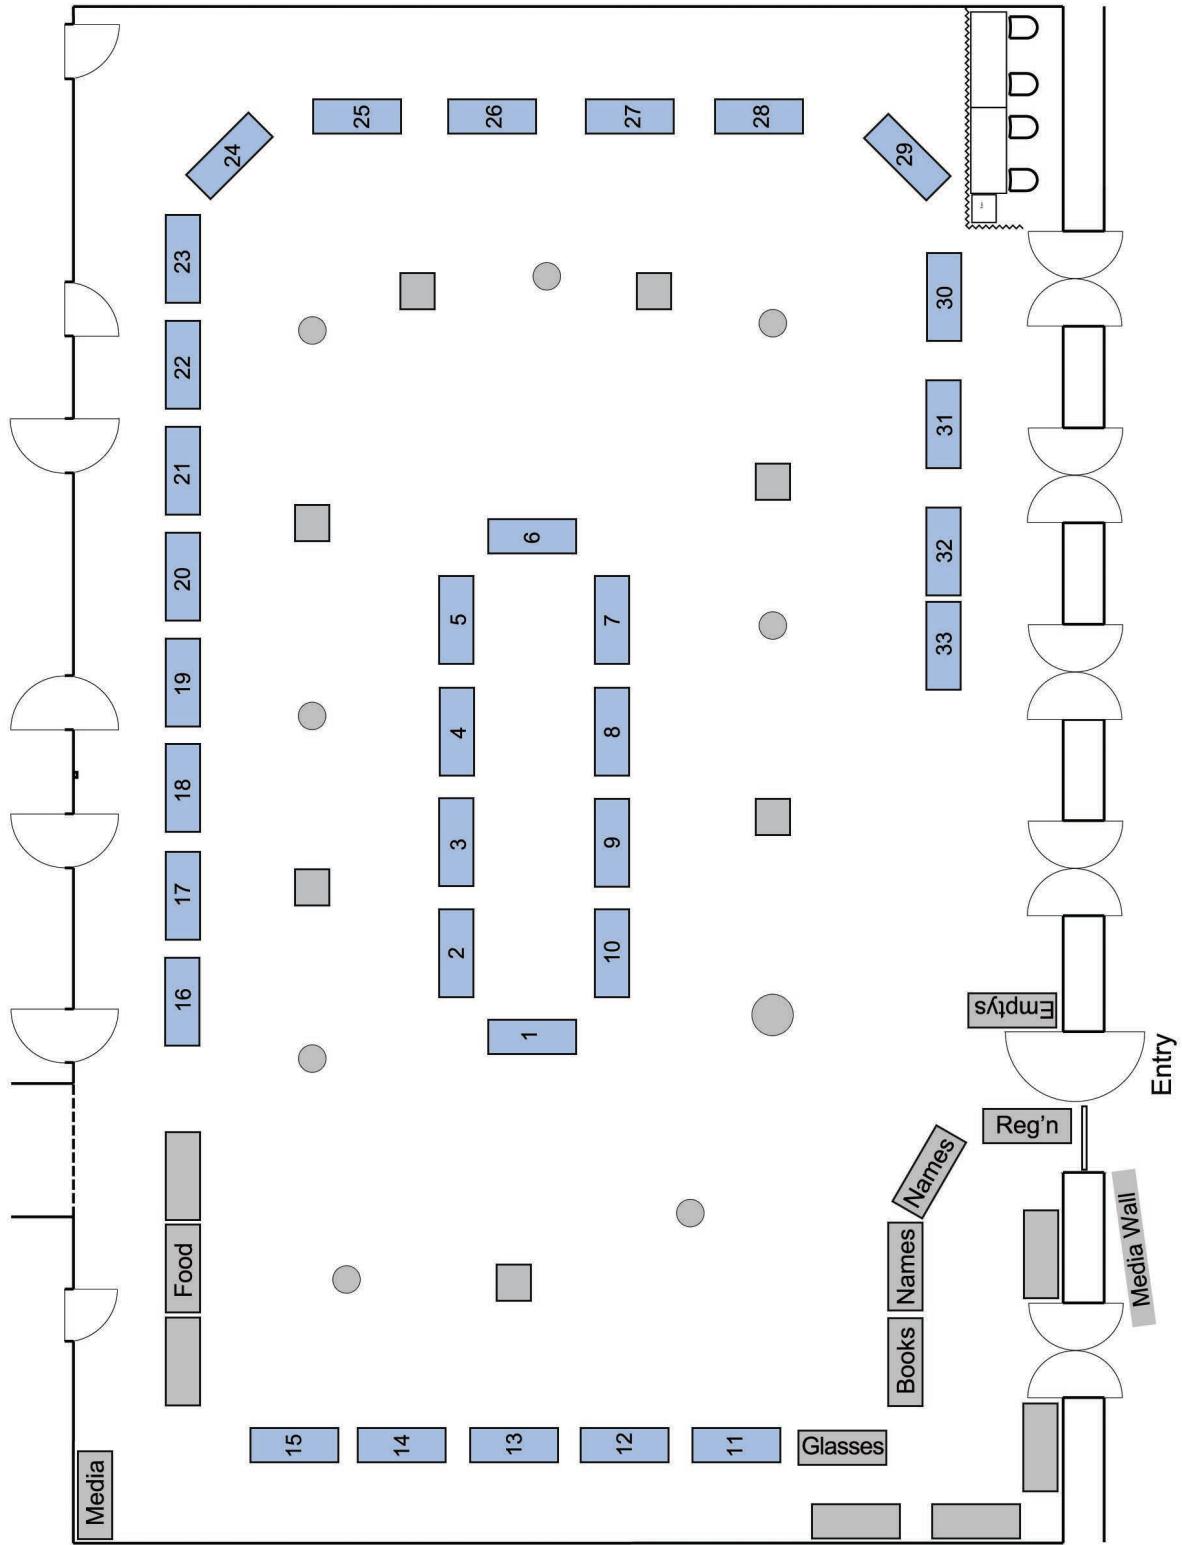

This is why Taste Champagne returns with a vengeance in 2023, lining up almost 200 of the latest and greatest cuvées from 68 champagne houses. As always, this event welcomes every house, from the smallest growers to the largest négociants and coopératives, from the grand crus of the Marne to the outposts of the Aube and the Sézanne.

Champagne has never been more spectacularly diverse, and never more universally outstanding than it is this year.

It's my great pleasure to welcome to Taste Champagne, to discover this exciting new age of champagne for yourself!
